

THE 5-MINUTE SOMATIC TRACKING RESET

A free practice for a body stuck on high alert

THE IDEA: when your nervous system has been in overdrive for a long time, it can start treating pain and tension as danger signals, even when nothing is structurally wrong. Somatic tracking teaches your brain a new response: curious and safe instead of alarmed and fighting.

DO THIS (5 minutes)

1. Settle. Sit somewhere you feel safe. Take 3 slow breaths, longer on the exhale.
2. Pick one sensation. Choose a spot of tension, ache, or tightness. Just one.
3. Observe with curiosity. Notice location, size, temperature, movement. Be an explorer, not a fixer.
4. Speak safety. Silently repeat: "This is a safe sensation. My body is okay right now."
5. Stay curious. If the pain spikes, don't push. Soften your jaw and shoulders, breathe, keep watching.
6. Finish it up. Stop at 5 minutes. Write one line about what you noticed.

WHEN THE PAIN FLARES, SAY ONE OF THESE

1. "This is a danger signal, not damage."
2. "My brain is protecting me. I can thank it and let go."
3. "I'm safe. This will pass."

TRY IT FOR 7 DAYS

Once a day, same time. Tick a box after each session:

MON ☐	TUE ☐	WED ☐	THU ☐	FRI ☐	SAT ☐	SUN ☐

Safety first: get any new or unexplained pain checked by a doctor before starting. This is an educational practice, not medical advice or treatment, and it doesn't replace care from your healthcare providers.

WANT HELP MAKING THIS STICK?

Book a free 30-minute discovery call | excelsior-prt.com | Coaching by video, anywhere